The material in this workbook is related to the paper-based TOEFL test.

The TOEFL practice materials used in this study book were taken from actual test forms given to examinees at two worldwide test administrations.

Some reading materials have been adapted from previously published articles or books. To make these materials suitable for testing purposes, the length and wording may have been altered somewhat.

The ideas expressed in the reading and listening materials contained in this publication do not necessarily represent the opinions of the TOEFL Board or Educational Testing Service (ETS).

The TOEFL program does not operate, endorse, or recommend any schools or study materials that claim to prepare people for the TOEFL test in a short time or that promise them high scores on the test. Any use of material in the TOEFL Practice Tests, TOEFL Sample Test, TOEFL Test Preparation Kit, or TOEFL Information Bulletin for Computer-Based and Paper-Based Testing by a school or study program does not mean that it has been endorsed by Educational Testing Service or the TOEFL program.

About the TOEFL Test

The Test of English as a Foreign Language is used to evaluate the English proficiency of individuals whose native language is not English. Most people who take the TOEFL test are planning to study at North American universities or colleges. More than 2,400 universities and colleges in the United States and Canada, as well as in other countries where English is the language of instruction, require TOEFL scores of applicants who are nonnative speakers of English. Many government agencies, scholarship programs, and other institutions also use TOEFL test scores.

Beginning to study English just before you take the TOEFL test is not likely to have much effect on your performance. English proficiency involves skills that ordinarily can be achieved only after a long period of study and practice. Reviewing what you have already learned, however, can be very helpful, and so can knowing what to expect when you take the test. These Practice Tests and the Sample Test, TOEFL Test Preparation Kit, and Information Bulletin are all useful in preparing for the paper-based test.

Although working with the questions in this book may certainly help you on the TOEFL test, knowledge of these questions will not necessarily guarantee you a high score. The best way to improve your general ability to understand and use the English language is through a regular program of language study.

It is important to note that

- There are no fixed passing or failing scores for the TOEFL test. Each institution or agency that requires TOEFL scores decides what scores are acceptable for its purposes.
- The actual length of the test will vary from one test administration to another. Therefore, actual testing time may be from two hours to two and one-half hours. An additional hour is required to admit examinees to the testing room, to allow examinees time to enter identifying information on answer sheets, and to distribute and collect the test materials.

You will also be required to write a short essay at every administration. The purpose of the Test of Written English (TWE) is to provide examinees with an opportunity to demonstrate their ability to write in English.

See pages 109-111 for more information about the TWE® test.
Preparing for the Actual TOEFL Test

The TOEFL Information Bulletin describes in detail the procedures that will be followed at the test center. Before the day of the test, you should read carefully the following sections in the Bulletin: Identification Requirements, What to Take to the Test Center, and Admission to the Test Center.

Important: If you do not present the required identification — usually a passport — printed on your admission ticket, you will not be admitted by the test center supervisor.

At the test center, before the test begins, you will be given general directions explaining what you and the other examinees are to do. These directions must be followed. The TOEFL office will not score the answer sheet and will not refund the test fee of anyone who:

► attempts to take a test book or answer sheet from the testing room.
► attempts to take the test for someone else. (Your signature and photograph will be included on your TOEFL score report.)
► gives or receives assistance during the test.
► fails to follow instructions given by the test supervisor.
► reads or works on one section of the test during the time allowed for another or continues to work after time is called.
► makes any marks or underlines words in the test book or makes notes in the test book or on the answer sheet.
► takes dictionaries, other books, notes, scratch paper, watch alarms, listening devices, recording or photographic devices, highlighters, or colored pens or pencils of any kind into the testing room.
► takes tobacco, gum, candy, food, or beverages into the testing room.
► leaves the testing room without permission.
► creates a disturbance or behaves inappropriately.
► makes notes about the test questions or answers or copies them from the test book.
► cheats in any other way. The supervisor must report any suspected cheating to the TOEFL office.

Refer to the TOEFL Information Bulletin for additional test day procedures.

General Information
Taking the TOEFL Practice Tests

Taking the TOEFL practice tests will give you a good idea of what the actual test is like in terms of the types of questions you will be asked and the time limits you will have. You will learn, for example, that the time allotted for a test section must be used for reading the directions as well as answering the questions.

The TOEFL test is divided into three sections. Each section or part of a section begins with a set of special directions that includes sample questions and answers. It is important to read these directions so you will understand exactly what you are to do before you start to work on that section or part.

Some of the questions are harder than others, but try to answer every one. If you are not sure of the correct answer to a question, make the best guess you can and go on to the next question. It is to your advantage to answer every question, even if you have to guess.

As you are taking the test, work rapidly but carefully. Do not spend too much time on any one question. Do not use note paper, and do not write or make any marks in the test section of your book.

Each section of the test has a time limit. The recorded instructions will tell you when to start Section 1 and when to stop. You will need to use a watch or clock to time Sections 2 and 3. If you finish one section early, do NOT go on to the next section until the allotted time has ended. During the time that remains, check your work on that section only. If you do not follow this rule when you go to take an actual TOEFL test, it will be considered cheating, and your scores will be canceled.

You must follow strict rules and procedures when you go to a TOEFL test center. Try to take the practice tests in the same way.

- Plan to use approximately two hours without interruption to take each practice test.
- Choose a quiet room in which to work.
- Have a watch or clock so you can use the correct amount of time for Section 2 (25 minutes) and Section 3 (55 minutes).
- Have two sharpened #2 black lead pencils and an eraser.
- Test your CD player before you start to be sure it works properly.
- Remove any dictionaries or study materials from your work area.

Completing Your Answer Sheet

There are two versions of the answer sheet — horizontal and vertical. When you take TOEFL at a test center, you will receive only one version of the answer sheet. Look at the examples below to see how you should mark the answer sheet. Practice taking the test using both the horizontal and vertical answer sheets. (See pages 13 and 57.)

When you mark your answers on the answer sheet:

- Use a medium-soft (#2 or HB) black lead pencil.
- Mark only one answer to each question.
- Be sure to mark your answer in the row with the same number as the question you are answering.
- Carefully and completely fill in the oval corresponding to the answer you choose for each question. If you change your mind about an answer after you have marked it on your answer sheet, completely erase your old answer and then mark your new answer.

The examples below show you the correct way and wrong ways to mark each version of the answer sheet.

When you are ready to start:

- Remove the answer sheet for Practice Test A (page 13) from your book.
- Leave your book open to page 15. Place both the book and answer sheet in front of you.
- Put the CD in your player and press Play. Follow the instructions you hear.

Section 1
Listening Comprehension

In this section of the test, you will have an opportunity to demonstrate your ability to understand conversations and talks in English. There are three parts to this section with special directions for each part. Answer all the questions on the basis of what is stated or implied by the speakers in this test. When you take the actual TOEFL test, you will not be allowed to take notes or write in your test book. Try to work on Practice Test A in the same way.

Part A

Directions: In Part A, you will hear short conversations between two people. After each conversation, you will hear a question about the conversation. Section 3
Reading Comprehension

Time: 55 minutes (including the reading of the directions)
Now set your clock for 55 minutes.

Directions: In this section you will read several passages. Each one is followed by several questions about it. For questions 1-50, you are to choose the one best answer, (A), (B), (C), or (D), to each question. Then, on your answer sheet, find the number of the question and fill in the space that corresponds to the letter of the answer you have chosen.

Answer all questions following a passage on the basis of what is stated or implied in that passage.

Read the following passage:

The railroad was not the first institution to impose regularity on society, or to draw attention to the importance of precise timekeeping. For as long as merchants have set out their wares at daybreak and communal festivities have been celebrated, line (5) people have been in rough agreement with their neighbors as to the time of day. The value of this tradition is today more apparent than ever. Were it not for public acceptance of a single yardstick of time, social life would be unbearably chaotic: the massive daily transfers of goods, services, and information would proceed in fits and starts; the very fabric of modern society would begin to unravel.

Example I

What is the main idea of the passage?

(A) In modern society we must make more time for our neighbors.

(B) The traditions of society are timeless.

(C) An accepted way of measuring time is essential for the smooth functioning of society.

(D) Society judges people by the times at which they conduct certain activities.

The main idea of the passage is that societies need to agree about how time is to be measured in order to function smoothly. Therefore, you should choose (C).

Example II

In line 5, the phrase “this tradition” refers to

(A) the practice of starting the business day at dawn

(B) friendly relations between neighbors

(C) the railroad’s reliance on time schedules

(D) people’s agreement on the measurement of time

The phrase “this tradition” refers to the preceding clause, “people have been in rough agreement with their neighbors as to the time of day.” Therefore, you should choose (D).

Questions 6-16

There are two basic types of glaciers, those that flow outward in all directions with little regard for any underlying terrain and those that are confined by terrain to a particular path.

The first category of glaciers includes those massive blankets that cover whole continents, appropriately called ice sheets. There must be over 50,000 square kilometers of land covered with ice for the glacier to qualify as an ice sheet. When portions of an ice sheet spread out over the ocean, they form ice shelves.

About 20,000 years ago the Cordillera Ice Sheet covered nearly all the mountains in southern Alaska, western Canada, and the western United States. It was about 3 kilometers deep at its thickest point in northern Alberta. Now there are only two sheets left on Earth, those covering Greenland and Antarctica.

Any domelike body of ice that also flows out in all directions but covers less than 50,000 square kilometers is called an ice cap. Although ice caps are rare nowadays, there are a number in northeastern Canada, on Baffin Island, and on the Queen Elizabeth Islands.

The second category of glaciers includes those of a variety of shapes and sizes generally called mountain or alpine glaciers. Mountain glaciers are typically identified by the landform that controls their flow. One form of mountain glacier that resembles an ice cap in that it flows outward in several directions is called an ice field. The difference between an ice field and an ice cap is subtle. Essentially, the flow of an ice field is somewhat controlled by surrounding terrain and thus does not have the domelike shape of a cap. There are several ice fields in the Wrangell, St. Elias, and Chugach mountains of Alaska and northern British Columbia.

Less spectacular than large ice fields are the most common types of mountain glaciers: the cirque and valley glaciers. Cirque glaciers are found in depressions in the surface of the land and have a characteristic circular shape. The ice of valley glaciers, bound by terrain, flows down valleys, curves around their corners, and falls over cliffs.

Questions 27-38

The first two decades of this century were dominated by the microbe hunters. These hunters had tracked down one after another of the microbes responsible for the most dreaded scourges of many centuries: tuberculosis, cholera, diphtheria. But there remained some terrible diseases for which no microbe could be incriminated: scurvy, pellagra, rickets, beriberi. Then it was discovered that these diseases were caused by the lack of vitamins, a trace substance in the diet. The diseases could be prevented or cured by consuming foods that contained the vitamins. And so in the decades of the 1920’s and 1930’s, nutrition became a science and the vitamin hunters replaced the microbe hunters.

In the 1940’s and 1950’s, biochemists strived to learn why each of the vitamins was essential for health. They discovered that key enzymes in metabolism depend on one or another of the vitamins as coenzymes to perform the chemistry that provides cells with energy for growth and function. Now, these enzyme hunters occupied center stage.

You are aware that the enzyme hunters have been replaced by a new breed of hunters who are tracking genes—the blueprints for each of the enzymes—and are discovering the defective genes that cause inherited diseases—diabetes, cystic fibrosis. These gene hunters, or genetic engineers, use recombinant DNA technology to identify and clone genes and introduce them into bacterial cells and plants to create factories for the massive production of hormones and vaccines for medicine and for better crops for agriculture. Biotechnology has become a multibillion-dollar industry.

In view of the inexorable progress in science, we can expect that the gene hunters will be replaced in the spotlight. When and by whom? Which kind of hunter will dominate the scene in the last decade of our waning century and in the early decades of the next? I wonder whether the hunters who will occupy the spotlight will be neurobiologists who apply the techniques of the enzyme and gene hunters to the functions of the brain. What to call them? The head hunters. I will return to them later.

Part B

Questions 31 through 33. Listen to a conversation between two drama students.

(woman) Have you heard? A new academic dean will be installed this week, and it seems that he already has a lot of new ideas.

(man) Oh yeah, campus radio announced that he's starting a new internship program. Students will actually get a chance to join local opera companies on their productions.

(woman) That sounds intriguing. I wonder how he got the idea?

(man) Well, it seems he set up a similar program in another university and he feels that practical experience is an important addition to the artistic training in the theater.

(woman) You mean we'll get course credit for watching the opera companies rehearse?

(man) We'll get course credit all right, but we'll have to earn it by working hard with the company.

(woman) If I decided to participate, who would decide what job I'd get?

Questions 34 through 37. Listen to a conversation in the library.

(man) Excuse me. I wonder if you could help me. The reference librarian at the main library suggested I come here.

(woman) What can I do for you?

(man) Well, I'm working on a term paper about the influence of television on recent United States presidential elections. I found a few of the books I need at the main library, but I was told that the library here at the graduate school had more specialized materials.

(woman) Of course it depends on what you want, but we do subscribe to a large number of journals. Since you're working on such a broad topic you'll probably have to do a lot of digging. It may take some time, but I'm sure you'll be able to find many articles relevant to your topic. We also have quite a few newspapers on microfilm.

(man) I think I've come to the right place. How can I find out which journals you have?

(woman) I can give you a list of all of them. But if you want to search by author or by subject you can use one of the computers over there in the corner. Everything we have is in there.

(man) What if I run across a reference to a research study that isn't available here?

(woman) You can request any outside material just by typing your request into the computer.

(man) You mean you can get material from other universities?
Questions 42 through 46. Listen to a student telling his classmates about something he saw last summer.

(man) When I was in British Columbia last July working at the department’s archaeological dig, I saw the weirdest rainbow. At first I couldn’t believe my eyes because the bands of color I saw weren’t in a single half circle arc across the sky. Instead, I saw a full circle of rainbow hues hanging in the sky just above the sea. Inside the circle there was a big white disc and above the circle there was another round band of colors forming a halo. There were curved legs of multicolored light coming off the sides of the circles. It was an incredible sight.

I ran back to our main camp and tried to get our cook to come with me to see my fantastic find before it disappeared. He just laughed at my excited story and told me that what I saw was nothing special. . . . just some “sun dogs.” He said I’d be sure to see many more before I left. And sure enough, I did. When I got back from the dig I asked Professor Clark about the “sun dogs,” and she’s going to tell us more about them.

Questions 38 through 41. Listen to a talk given in a university class.

(woman) In today’s class we’ll be examining some nineteenth-century pattern books that were used for building houses. I think it’s fair to say that these pattern books were the most important influence on the design of North American houses during the nineteenth century.

This was because most people who wanted to build a house couldn’t afford to hire an architect. Instead, they bought a pattern book, picked out a plan, and took it to the builder. The difference in cost was substantial. In 1870, for example, hiring an architect would’ve cost about a hundred dollars. At the same time, a pattern book written by an architect cost only five dollars.

At that price, it’s easy to see why pattern books were so popular. Some are back in print again today, and of course they cost a lot more than they did a hundred years ago. But they’re an invaluable resource for historians, and also for people who restore old houses. I have a modern reprint here that I’ll be passing around the room in a moment so that everyone can have a look.

Questions 25 through 28. Listen to an interview with an author.

(woman) In the 1960s, when I was a student at Brown University, I met a boy next door who was an extremely talented songwriter. His name was Bob. Although he was only sixteen, he was already writing songs with his own style. We became close friends and would often go out together to listen to music. One day, we decided to write a song together.

Questions 29 through 32. Listen to a conversation about the American Civil War.

(woman) The Civil War was a very important event in American history. It was fought from 1861 to 1865 and was fought between the North and the South. The war was fought to decide whether the United States would remain a Union or split into two separate nations.

Questions 33 through 36. Listen to a talk about the effects of television on children.

(woman) Television has had a significant impact on children’s behavior. Studies have shown that children who watch a lot of television are more likely to have behavior problems, such as aggression and hyperactivity. This is because television provides a constant stream of images and sounds that can be overwhelming for young children.

Questions 37 through 40. Listen to a talk about the history of the American Civil War.

(woman) The American Civil War was a very important event in American history. It was fought from 1861 to 1865 and was fought between the North and the South. The war was fought to decide whether the United States would remain a Union or split into two separate nations.
Questions 47 through 50. Listen to a talk about the medical profession.

(woman) It seems like only yesterday that I was sitting where you are, just finishing my first year of medical school and wondering if I’d ever get a chance to use all my new knowledge on a real live patient!

Well, I have good news for you! You don’t have to wait until your third or fourth year of medical school to get some hands-on experience! The dean has invited me here to tell you about the university’s rural opportunities program. If you enroll in this program, you can have the opportunity this summer, after your first year of medical school, to spend from four to six weeks observing and assisting a real physician like me in a small rural community. You won’t have to compete with other students for time and attention, and you can see what life as a country doctor is really like.

The program was designed to encourage medical students like yourselves to consider careers in rural communities that are still understaffed. It seems that medical students are afraid to go into rural family practice for two reasons. First, they don’t know much about it. And second, specialists in the cities usually make more money. But, on the up-side, in rural practice, doctors can really get to know their patients and be respected members of the community.

I participated in the program when it first started and spent six weeks in a small rural town. Let me tell you, it was really great! I got to work with real patients. I watched the birth of a child, assisted an accident victim, and had lots of really practical hands-on experience — all in one summer. And to my surprise, I found that country life has a lot to offer that city life doesn’t — no pollution or traffic jams, for instance!

My experience made me want to work where I’m needed and appreciated. I don’t miss the city at all!

47. For whom is the talk intended?

48. What would be a successful result of the program being described?

49. What benefit does the program offer to participants?

50. According to the speaker, what is one disadvantage of a rural medical practice?

Reading Comprehension

Time: 55 minutes (including the reading of the directions)
Now set your clock for 55 minutes.

Directions: In this section you will read several passages. Each one is followed by several questions about it. For questions 1–50, you are to choose the one best answer, (A), (B), (C), or (D), to each question. Then, on your answer sheet, find the number of the question and fill in the space that corresponds to the letter of the answer you have chosen.

Answer all questions following a passage on the basis of what is stated or implied in that passage.

Read the following passage:

The railroad was not the first institution to impose regularity on society, or to draw attention to the importance of precise timekeeping. For as long as merchants have set out their wares at daybreak and communal festivities have been celebrated, people have been in rough agreement with their neighbors as to the time of day. The value of this tradition is today more apparent than ever. Were it not for public acceptance of a single yardstick of time, social life would be unbearably chaotic; the massive daily transfers of goods, services, and information would proceed in fits and starts; the very fabric of modern society would begin to unravel.

Example I

What is the main idea of the passage?

(A) In modern society we must make more time for our neighbors.

(B) The traditions of society are timeless.

(C) An accepted way of measuring time is essential for the smooth functioning of society.

(D) Society judges people by the times at which they conduct certain activities.

The main idea of the passage is that societies need to agree about how time is to be

In line 5, the phrase “this tradition” refers to

(A) the practice of starting the business day at dawn

(B) friendly relations between neighbors

(C) the railroad’s reliance on time schedules

(D) people’s agreement on the measurement of time

The phrase “this tradition” refers to the preceding clause, “people have been in rough

Questions 1-9

The ocean bottom—a region nearly 2.5 times greater than the total land area of the Earth—is a vast frontier that even today is largely unexplored and uncharted. Until about a century ago, the deep-ocean floor was completely inaccessible, hidden beneath waters averaging over 3,600 meters deep. Totally without light and subjected to intense pressures hundreds of times greater than at the Earth's surface, the deep-ocean bottom is a hostile environment to humans, in some ways as forbidding and remote as the void of outer space.

Although researchers have taken samples of deep-ocean rocks and sediments for over a century, the first detailed global investigation of the ocean bottom did not actually start until 1968, with the beginning of the National Science Foundation’s Deep Sea Drilling Project (DSDP). Using techniques first developed for the offshore oil and gas industry, the DSDP’s drill ship, the Glomar Challenger, was able to maintain a steady position on the ocean’s surface and drill in very deep waters, extracting samples of sediments and rock from the ocean floor.

The Glomar Challenger completed 96 voyages in a 15-year research program that ended in November 1983. During this time, the vessel logged 600,000 kilometers and took almost 20,000 core samples of seabed sediments and rocks at 624 drilling sites around the world. The Glomar Challenger’s core samples have allowed geologists to reconstruct what the planet looked like hundreds of millions of years ago and to calculate what it will probably look like millions of years in the future. Today, largely on the strength of evidence gathered during the Glomar Challenger’s voyages, nearly all earth scientists agree on the theories of plate tectonics and continental drift that explain many of the geological processes that shape the Earth.

The cores of sediment drilled by the Glomar Challenger have also yielded information critical to understanding the world’s past climates. Deep-ocean sediments provide a climatic record stretching back hundreds of millions of years, because they are largely isolated from the mechanical erosion and the intense chemical and biological activity that rapidly destroy much land-based evidence of past climates. This record has already provided insights into the patterns and causes of past climatic change—information that may be used to predict future climates.

Questions 10-21

Basic to any understanding of Canada in the 20 years after the Second World War is the country’s impressive population growth. For every three Canadians in 1945, there were over five in 1966. In September 1966 Canada’s population passed the 20 million mark. Most of this surging growth came from natural increase. The depression of the 1930’s and the war had held back marriages, and the catching-up process began after 1945. The baby boom continued through the decade of the 1950’s, producing a population increase of nearly fifteen percent in the five years from 1951 to 1956. This rate of increase had been exceeded only once before in Canada’s history, in the decade before 1911, when the prairies were being settled. Undoubtedly, the good economic conditions of the 1950’s supported a growth in the population, but the expansion also derived from a trend toward earlier marriages and an increase in the average size of families. In 1957 the Canadian birth rate stood at 28 per thousand, one of the highest in the world.

After the peak year of 1957, the birth rate in Canada began to decline. It continued falling until in 1966 it stood at the lowest level in 25 years. Partly this decline reflected the low level of births during the depression and the war, but it was also caused by changes in Canadian society. Young people were staying at school longer; more women were working; young married couples were buying automobiles or houses before starting families; rising living standards were cutting down the size of families.

It appeared that Canada was once more falling in step with the trend toward smaller families that had occurred all through the Western world since the time of the Industrial Revolution.

Although the growth in Canada’s population had slowed down by 1966 (the increase in the first half of the 1960’s was only nine percent), another large population wave was coming over the horizon. It would be composed of the children of the children who were born during the period of the high birth rate prior to 1957.

Questions 22-30

Are organically grown foods the best food choices? The advantages claimed for such foods over conventionally grown and marketed food products are now being debated. Advocates of organic foods—a term whose meaning varies greatly—are frequently proclaimed that such products are safer and more nutritious than others. The growing interest of consumers in the safety and nutritional quality of the typical North American diet is a welcome development. However, much of this interest has been sparked by sweeping claims that the food supply is unsafe or inadequate in meeting nutritional needs. Although most of these claims are not supported by scientific evidence, the preponderance of written material advancing such claims makes it difficult for the general public to separate fact from fiction. As a result, claims that eating a diet consisting entirely of organically grown foods prevents or cures disease or provides other benefits to health have become widely publicized and form the basis for folklore.

Almost daily the public is besieged by claims for "no-aging" diets, new vitamins, and other wonder foods. There are numerous unsubstantiated reports that natural vitamins are superior to synthetic ones, that fertilized eggs are nutritionally superior to unfertilized eggs, that untreated grains are better than fumigated grains, and the like.

One thing that most organically grown food products seem to have in common is that they cost more than conventionally grown foods. But in many cases consumers are misled if they believe organic foods can maintain health and provide better nutritional quality than conventionally grown foods. So there is real cause for concern if consumers, particularly those with limited incomes, distrust the regular food supply and buy only expensive organic foods instead.

Questions 31-40

There are many theories about the beginning of drama in ancient Greece. The one most widely accepted today is based on the assumption that drama evolved from ritual. The argument for this view goes as follows. In the beginning, human beings viewed the natural forces of the world, even the seasonal changes, as unpredictable, and they sought, through various means, to control these unknown and feared powers. Those measures which appeared to bring the desired results were then retained and repeated until they hardened into fixed rituals. Eventually stories arose which explained or veiled the mysteries of the rites. As time passed some rituals were abandoned, but the stories, later called myths, persisted and provided material for art and drama.

Those who believe that drama evolved out of ritual also argue that those rites contained the seed of theater because music, dance, masks, and costumes were almost always used. Furthermore, a suitable site had to be provided for performances, and when the entire community did not participate, a clear division was usually made between the "acting area" and the "auditorium." In addition, there were performers, and, since considerable importance was attached to avoiding mistakes in the enactment of rites, religious leaders usually assumed that task. Wearing masks and costumes, they often impersonated other people, animals, or supernatural beings, and mimed the desired effect — success in hunt or battle, the coming rain, the revival of the Sun — as an actor might. Eventually such dramatic representations were separated from religious activities.

Another theory traces the theater's origin from the human interest in storytelling. According to this view, tales (about the hunt, war, or other feats) are gradually elaborated, at first through the use of impersonation, action, and dialogue by a narrator and then through the assumption of each of the roles by a different person. A closely related theory traces theater to those dances that are primarily rhythmical and gymnastic or that are imitations of animal movements and sounds.

Questions 41-50

Staggering tasks confronted the people of the United States, North and South, when the Civil War ended. About a million and a half soldiers from both sides had to be demobilized, readjusted to civilian life, and reabsorbed by the devastated economy. Civil government also had to be put back on a peacetime basis and interference from the military had to be stopped.

The desperate plight of the South has eclipsed the fact that reconstruction had to be undertaken also in the North, though less spectacularly. Industries had to adjust to peacetime conditions; factories had to be retooled for civilian needs. Financial problems loomed large in both the North and the South. The national debt had shot up from a modest $65 million in 1861, the year the war started, to nearly $3 billion in 1865, the year the war ended. This was a colossal sum for those days but one that a prudent government could pay. At the same time, war taxes had to be reduced to less burdensome levels. Physical devastation caused by invading armies, chiefly in the South and border states, had to be repaired. This Herculean task was ultimately completed, but with discouraging slowness.

Other important questions needed answering. What would be the future of the four million Black people who were freed from slavery? On what basis were the Southern states to be brought back into the Union?

What of the Southern leaders, all of whom were liable to charges of treason? One of these leaders, Jefferson Davis, president of the Southern Confederacy, was the subject of an insulting popular Northern song, "Hang Jeff Davis from a Sour Apple Tree," and even children sang it. Davis was temporarily chained in his prison cell during the early days of his two-year imprisonment. But he and the other Southern leaders were finally released, partly because it was unlikely that a jury from Virginia, a Southern Confederate state, would convict them. All the leaders were finally pardoned by President Johnson in 1868 in an effort to help reconstruction efforts proceed with as little bitterness as possible.

Tear out the script on pages 93-100. Place it next to the test questions so you can see the four answer choices.
Read the script as you listen to the recorded material. It will help you recognize words that you may not have understood correctly.

You must score your own TOEFL answer sheet. Do NOT send it to the TOEFL office. If you do, the answer sheet will not be returned to you.
Part A

1. (woman) Do you want to go on a trip with us to Florida this spring? It will cost about three hundred dollars a person.
   (man) Three hundred dollars! Do you think I just inherited a fortune?
   (narrator) What can be inferred about the man?

2. (woman) My watch stopped again. And I just got a new battery.
   (man) Why don’t you take it to Smith’s Jewelry? They can check it for you, and they’re pretty reasonable.
   (narrator) What does the man mean?

3. (woman) We’re going to change our meeting from Monday to Tuesday.
   (man) It’s all the same to me.
   (narrator) What does the man mean?

   (woman) I doubt it — guess we’ll wind up going to the second show.
   (narrator) What does the woman mean?

9. (woman) This course is much too hard for me.
   (man) Sorry you decided to take it, huh?
   (narrator) What does the man ask the woman?
10. (man) Are you going home for winter vacation?
   (woman) I've agreed to stay on here as a research assistant.
   (narrator) What can be inferred about the woman?

11. (man) Hello.

   (narrator) What does the man mean?

12. (woman) How wonderful! You won the scholarship. Can you believe it?
   (man) No, it's almost too good to be true.
   (narrator) What does the man mean?

13. (woman) Excuse me, Professor Davidson, but I was hoping to talk to you about my class project for economics.
   (man) I have a class in a few minutes. Why don't you come and see me during office hours tomorrow?
   (narrator) When will the woman discuss her project with Professor Davidson?

   (narrator) What does the woman say about the film?

22. (man) I talked to Philip today and he said he'd be coming to the party.
   (woman) Oh, so he can come after all.
   (narrator) What can be inferred about Philip?

23. (man) Gary insists on buying the food for the picnic.
   (woman) That's pretty generous, but shouldn't we at least offer to share

Questions 34 through 37. Listen to a conversation between two friends.

(man) Hey, how was your trip?
(woman) Wonderful, I spent most of my time at the art museum. I especially liked the new wing. I was amazed to hear the guide explain all the problems they had building it.

(man) Right. I just read an article that went on and on about the cost — ninety million total, I think.
(woman) Yeah, the guide mentioned that. You could see they spared no expense.
(man) Hmm. It looked really unusual, at least from what I saw in the picture.
(woman) It is. The basic design is two triangles. In fact, there are triangles all over — the paving stones in the courtyard, the skylights, and even a lot of the sculptures. One sculpture is a mobile. It’s in the courtyard and it’s made of pieces of aluminum that move slowly in the air. It’s really impressive.

(man) That was in the article too. It said the original was steel, and it weighed so much that it wasn’t safe to hang.
(woman) Right. They did it over in aluminum so it wouldn’t come crashing down on someone’s head.

(man) You know, the article went into that in detail. There was even an interview with the sculptor.
(woman) I’d like to read that. Would you mind if I borrowed the magazine sometime?
(man) No, I wouldn’t mind, if I haven’t thrown it out yet.

34. What did the woman think of the new wing of the museum?
35. How had the man learned about the museum?
36. According to the woman, what do the paving stones, skylights, and mobile have in common?
37. What was the problem with the original mobile?
Part C

Questions 38 through 41. Listen to an announcement in a university class.

(woman) In the few minutes that remain of today’s class, I’d like to discuss next week’s schedule with you. Because I’m presenting a paper at a conference in Detroit on Thursday, I won’t be here for either Wednesday’s or Friday’s class. I will, however, be here for Monday’s. Next Friday, a week from today, is the midterm exam, marking the halfway point in the semester. Professor Andrews has agreed to administer the exam. In place of the usual Wednesday class, I’ve arranged an optional review session. Since it is optional, attendance will not be taken; however, attending the class would be a good idea for those worried about the midterm. So, remember: optional class next Wednesday; midterm, Friday.

38. What is the purpose of the talk?
39. At what point during the semester does this talk take place?
40. What did Professor Andrews agree to do?
41. What will occur at next Wednesday’s class time?

Questions 42 through 46. Listen to part of a talk given in an anthropology class.

(man) Today’s lecture will center on prehistoric people of the Nevada desert. Now, most of these prehistoric desert people moved across the countryside throughout the year. You might think that they were wandering aimlessly — far from it! They actually followed a series of carefully planned moves. Where they moved depended on where food was available — places where plants were ripening or fish were spawning.

Now often when these people moved, they carried all their possessions on their backs, but if the journey was long, extra food and tools were sometimes stored in caves or beneath rocks. One of these caves is now an exciting archaeological site. Beyond its small opening is a huge underground grotto. Even though the cave’s very large, it was certainly too dark and dusty for the travelers to live in — but it was a great place to hide things, and tremendous amounts of food supplies and artifacts have been found there. The food includes dried fish, seeds, and nuts. The artifacts include stone spear points and knives; the spear points are actually rather small. Here’s a picture of some that were found. You can see their size in relation to the hands holding them.

42. What is the main subject of this talk?
43. What point does the speaker make about the prehistoric people of the Nevada desert?
44. Why didn’t people live in the cave described by the speaker?
45. What have archaeologists found in the cave?
46. Why does the speaker show a photo to the class?
Questions 47 through 50. Listen to part of a lecture given in a marine biology class.

(woman) To us, the environment in which fish dwell often seems cold, dark, and mysterious. But there are advantages to living in water, and they have played an important role in making fish what they are. One is that water isn’t subject to sudden temperature changes. Therefore it makes an excellent habitat for a cold-blooded animal. Another advantage is the water’s ability to easily support body weight. Protoplasm has approximately the same density as water, so a fish in water is almost weightless. This “weightlessness” in turn means two things: One, a fish can get along with a light weight and simple bone structure, and two, limitations to a fish’s size are practically removed.

Yet there is one basic difficulty to living in water — the fact that it’s incompressible. For a fish to move through water, it must actually shove it aside. Most can do this by wiggling back and forth in snakelike motion. The fish pushes water aside by the forward motion of its head, and with the curve of its body and its flexible tail. Next, the water flows back along the fish’s narrowing sides, closing in at the tail, and helping the fish propel itself forward.

The fact that water is incompressible has literally shaped the development of fish. A flat and angular shape can be moved through water only with difficulty. And for this reason, fish have a basic shape that is beautifully adapted to deal with this peculiarity.

47. What is the talk mainly about?

48. What does the speaker mention as a problem that water presents to fish?

49. The speaker compares a fish’s movement with that of what creature?

50. What aspect of a fish does the speaker discuss in the most detail?
How to Score the Practice Tests

Use the answer keys on pages 46 (Test A) and 91 (Test B) to determine which questions you answered correctly. Count the number of correct answers in each section of the tests and write the number in the appropriate box below.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section 1</th>
<th>Section 2</th>
<th>Section 3</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Test A</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Test B</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The number of correct answers for each section is your "number-right" score for that section. A number-right score is not the same as a reported TOEFL score. Paper-based test scores for Section 1 (Listening Comprehension) and Section 2 (Structure and Written Expression) range from 31 to 68, and the scores for Section 3 (Reading Comprehension) range from 31 to 67. The TOEFL paper-based total test score is reported on a scale that ranges from 310 to 677. For each unique form of the TOEFL test, statistical procedures are carried out for each section to adjust the conversion of number-right scores to "scaled" converted scores for any slight differences in difficulty. This process is called score equating and is carried out for each form of TOEFL to permit comparison of scaled scores for that particular form with scaled scores from other forms regardless of the level of difficulty of that form. As a result of these equating methods, a total score of 550, for example, on one edition of the test represents the same level of English language proficiency as a score of 550 on another edition.

When you have written your number-right scores for all sections in the boxes, look at the "converted score" charts on page 105. For these charts, a unique table was developed for each section of each practice test, as is done for each TOEFL test, to convert number-right scores to scaled scores. The first column of each chart gives ranges of number-right scores. The second, third, and fourth columns give ranges of converted scores. The ranges provided in these charts are intended only to provide an approximate indicator of language proficiency and are never used in the scoring of an actual administration.

In the column marked "Number-Right Score Range" for each practice test, find the score range that includes your number-right score for Section 1. In the column marked "Section 1 Converted Score," find the range of converted scores for your number-right score. Write your converted score range for Section 1 in the appropriate box below. Do the same for your number-right scores for Section 2 and Section 3.

<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section 1</th>

<th>Section 3</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Test A</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Test B</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
When you have entered your ranges of converted scores for all three sections in the boxes, add the first or lower number of each of the three section score ranges together. Do the same for the last or higher numbers. This will give the converted score ranges for the three sections for each practice test.

Example of Score Calculation

Suppose the number-right scores for the three sections in Test A are Section 1 - 28, Section 2 - 30, Section 3 - 39. First, find the number-right range for each obtained score (first column of the table); then find and record the corresponding converted score range.

Add together the lower numbers of the three converted score ranges.

48 + 55 + 56 = 159

Next, add the higher numbers of the converted score ranges.

49 + 57 + 58 = 164

The range of the sum of the converted scores for the three sections is 159-164.

Now multiply each number in this range by 10/3.

159 x 10/3 = 530.00 = 530

164 x 10/3 = 546.66 = 547

When multiplication by 10/3 results in a decimal value of .33, round down to the nearest whole number. Round up to the next highest whole number if multiplication by 10/3 results in a decimal value of .66.

The total (converted) score range is 530-547.

Remember, people perform differently at different times and in different situations. It is possible that if you take TOEFL at a regular test center, your scores will fall within the range of scores you earned on these practice tests, but they may also be higher or lower. This is because you have taken the practice tests under different conditions than those at an actual test center. It is also because the scores reported for the TOEFL test, or for any test, cannot be perfectly precise. An individual's scores can vary, just by chance, from one administration of the test to another, even when there is no change in the examinee's "true" ability.
The index that is commonly used to describe the degree of precision in a measurement is the "standard error of measurement." In the case of the TOEFL total score, the standard error of measurement is approximately 14. This means that if your "true" ability score — the total score you would earn if the test could measure your ability with perfect precision — is, for example, 560, the chances are about two out of three that the total score you earn on the test will be somewhere between 546 and 574 (560 plus or minus 14).

The table below shows the distribution of scores earned by examinees who took the TOEFL test between July 1997 and June 1998. You may wish to compare your score range on these practice tests with the scores of those examinees. Remember, you did not take the tests under standard conditions, and the scores you earn if you take TOEFL at a test center may be higher or lower than the scores you earned on these tests. Score data for more recent editions of the paper-based test are included in the Information Bulletin.

Acceptable Scores

Each institution that requires TOEFL test scores of applicants determines for itself what scores, or ranges of scores, are acceptable. These vary from institution to institution, depending on such factors as an applicant's field of study, the level of study (graduate or undergraduate), whether he or she will be a teaching assistant, and whether the institution offers special courses in English as a foreign or second language. In general, a total score of 600 or above is considered excellent. A score below 400 is regarded as weak. However, an acceptable TOEFL test score depends entirely on the requirements of the institution to which the applicant has applied. There is no specific passing or failing score for the TOEFL test.
About the Test of Written English

The Test of Written English (TWE) is an essay test that gives you an opportunity to demonstrate your skill at performing academic writing tasks similar to those required of students in North American universities. This includes the ability to generate and organize ideas on paper, to support those ideas with examples or evidence, and to compose in standard written English a response to an essay question. Because TWE is intended to measure composition skills rather than reading comprehension skills, topics are brief and easy to read. They are not based on other reading material.

When you take the TWE test, you will be given one topic on which to write an essay. TWE topics are designed to be fair and appropriate for international students and require no specialized knowledge of any given subject matter.

After a test administration, all the essays are read by qualified raters who assign scores based on a six-point scale. Your essay is read and evaluated by at least two readers working independently. The score you receive is the average of the scores assigned to the essay by the readers. The TWE score is not incorporated into the total TOEFL score. Instead, a separate TWE score is reported on the TOEFL score report. (For more information about TWE scores, see the TOEFL Information Bulletin for Computer-Based and Paper-Based Testing.)

Tips for Writing an Essay

► Think about the essay before you start to write. Making a brief outline or some notes on a separate piece of paper may help you to organize your essay. (On the actual test, you will be allowed to make notes in the TWE test book you receive.)

► For this practice exercise, use a two-sided sheet of lined paper. (On the day of the test, you will be provided with paper.) Start writing your essay on the first line of the sheet. Use the other side if you need more space. Use only these two sides.

► Do NOT skip lines. Do NOT write in very large letters or leave large margins.

► How well you write is much more important than how much you write, but to cover the topic adequately, you will probably want to write more than one paragraph.

► Write neatly and legibly. You will not be graded on the neatness of your handwriting, but the raters who evaluate your essay must be able to read your handwriting.

► Check your work. Allow a few minutes before the 30 minutes have ended to read over your essay and make changes.
Directions for Taking TWE

- Find a quiet location where you can work without interruption.
- Have two sharpened black lead pencils, an eraser, and several sheets of lined composition paper at your desk or table.
- Plan to use 30 minutes for each practice essay question you work on.

When you are ready to work on an essay question:
- Check your watch or clock. Start timing yourself for 30 minutes.
- Read carefully one of the topics on the next page.
- Begin.

TWE Practice Essay Questions

Topic 1
Successful students do well in school for many different reasons. Identify one or two important personal characteristics that help a student succeed in school. Use reasons and specific examples to show why you think these characteristics are important for student success.

Topic 2
Some people believe that newspapers are the best source of news. Other people think that the news is presented better on radio or television. Which of these sources of news do you prefer? Use reasons and specific examples to support your choice.

Stop working on your essay at the end of 30 minutes.

On the day of the actual test, working after time is called will be considered cheating.
What To Take To The Test Center

Report to the test center no later than the time printed on your admission ticket.

When you go to the test center you must have:

- Admission Ticket. Read the directions and complete the ticket.
- Photo File Record. You must sign it and attach a recent photograph of yourself. The photograph must show you as you will look on the day of the test and be clear enough so there is no doubt about your identity.
- Official Identification. The identification you will be required to take to the test center, usually a passport or a letter of identity, will be printed on your admission ticket. Read the Bulletin for complete information.
- Pencils. Take at least two sharpened, medium soft (#2 or HB) black lead pencils and an eraser.
- Watch. You may take a watch. However, watch alarms, including those with flashing lights or alarm sounds, are not permitted.
- Lunch. Luncheon facilities may not always be available at the test center. Therefore, you may wish to take your lunch. However, you will not be permitted to eat or drink in the testing room.

Important Things To Know

- Test scores more than two years old cannot be verified or reported to you or to institutions.
- If you believe you should not be required to take the TOEFL test, write directly to each institution to which you are applying. Do NOT write to the TOEFL office.
- Register early. Some centers fill up very quickly.
- Select a test administration date that is at least eight weeks before the deadline by which you are required to have your score report delivered to the college or university of your choice.
- You cannot register at the test center.
- Always use the same form of your name. Do not change the spelling, and do not change the order of your names. The form of your name you use on your TOEFL registration form and answer sheet must be the same as what is on the official identification document you will use on the day of the test.
